

QUEER EXPENSE ITEMS.

Uses for Uncle Sam's Money That Are Not Generally Known.

Some curious items enter into the expense account of Uncle Sam. Away out in Arizona, near the city of Florence, there is a ruin of the dwelling place of some prehistoric people. It is called Casa Grande. The government pays a man $480 a year to watch Casa Grande and see that some Chicago archaeologist doesn't carry it away for exhibition purposes.

Secretary Gresham tried to get along last year with $3,000 for bringing home the remains of diplomatic and consular officers of this country who died abroad. In view of the probable increase of mortality among the unusually large number of these patriots who have responded to the call of Joseph Quinay and have gone to places where the climate is bad, Mr. Gresham asks $10,000 the coming year for diplomatic mortality.

Another item of close relationship to the last mentioned is $5,000 to bring home the widows of those diplomats who die abroad.

The vaccination of Indians is a charge of $1,000 a year on the United States treasury.

The condition of the poor Indian is the inspiration of much sympathy among certain Caucasian philanthropists. The regular budget for the red man this year reaches $6,331,156.61. Next year it is expected to go to $7,203,111.44. This covers a multitude of things which civilized people have never thought of. For instance, every one of the 600 men Crows gets a $10 suit of "good woolen clothing, consisting of a coat, hat, trousers, flannel shirt, and woolen socks." Every one of the 700 women Crows gets "a flannel skirt, a pair of woolen hose, twelve yards of cotton domestic."

The end of the Indian budget is not in sight. The Indian is as good a slayer as the pensioner. Away back in 1794 the government stipulated to pay the Six Nations of New York state a certain sum—several thousand dollars—every year, and it is still doing it. There are annuities which have been paid to the Senecas religiously since 1817. The Shawnees have been getting a good round sum yearly since 1794. These and many like them are permanent annuities. Some of them have run a hundred years. Most of them have been in operation fifty years. They seem to be just as good for another century.

There are the Pottawatomies of Indiana and Michigan. They have worked the mine beautifully. In 1798 they got one permanent annuity, which has been paid regularly ever since. In 1809 they looked it to our grandfathers for another annuity. In 1818 the Pottawatomies came again, and this government agreed to pay them another so-much-a-year without any limitation of time. The fourth permanent annuity for this thrifty tribe was fastened upon the treasury in 1828. Between that time and 1836 four more permanent annuities were added to the Pottawatomies' list. And they have been paid faithfully every year. They will be paid next year and the next after, and nobody knows when the obligation will cease. Three of these annuities are payable in "silver," and all other annuities are payable in "specie." It was for the Indian all through the war and afterward, when white folks never saw the color of coin. Another annuity is in "specie." Two more are "in money." The other two annuities illustrate more forcibly the farcical. Every year since 1826 the government has solemnly delivered to the Pottawatomies fifty barrels of salt. And every year since 1828 this government has maintained a blacksmith's shop with equipment and supplies for three blacksmiths at a cost of $1,068.99 a year for the Pottawatomies.

The disbursements to these Pottawatomies, who long ago ceased to be Indians in all but name, amount to $20,647.65. They must, according to the treaties, go on forever. They are "permanent."

The Creeks have the oldest of these annuities. It started in 1790. The Chickasaws began to draw a permanent annuity in 1790. The Choctaws were put on the roll for $5,000 a year as early as 1805. Is it any wonder that the more civilized the Indians grow, the more the nation grows of his tribal relation and of Uncle Sam's paternalism?—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Why Red Angers a Bull.

The reason why anything of a red color excites and infuriates animals of the ox family is because red is the complementary color of green, and the eyes of cattle being long fixed upon the green herbage when feeding, when they spy anything red it impresses their sight with a greatly increased intensity. No doubt the same effect is produced upon all grazing animals by being suddenly confronted with the color red, but oxen and bulls, being more pugnacious, show greater excitement, and will even attack that which surprises them.

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting than has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil.

Strictly Pure White Lead forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

"Southern," Red Seal, "Collier."

For Colors.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a compound can paint a splendid coat of lead and mix your own paint. Saves time and expense in matching shades, and assures the best paint that is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on painting and coloring card, free. It will probably save you a good many dollars.

Women Who Go Shopping

Shrewd Physician's Glance at the City's Crowds.

The "Bargain Counter" and the Nervous and Muscular Strain on Women That Comes from Raving for the Household—The Preserver Against Poverty of Blood and Nervous Energy.

"Women read the Sunday paper in the big cities and the daily papers in the towns for the advertisements of marked down sales," says the Boston Globe. "Even as little girls they think of going shopping."

MRS. E. M. ABBOTT.

To a man, shopping is a nuisance vexations, tiring to his patience, and actually fatiguing to his muscles and nerves. It is often no less so to a woman. The care worn purchasers, especially on rainy days, laden with flapping, wet skirts, umbrellas and bundles, impress a physician with a sort of horror. The women have to go shopping. It's a necessity. There is a total disregard of the excessive strain upon their nerves and entire system.

"The danger of this overtaxing the centres which manufacture the nervous energy is impossible to estimate," said a wise physician. "One long to hear some authoritative voice call out: 'Stop! Stop!'"

Weakness is an element of all diseases. Faulty nutrition of some important part of the body brings easy exhaustion in Canada, in every village and town where there is a good physician.

Paine's celery compound is the marvelous preserver that has saved so many thousands of men and women struggling for existence against poverty of blood and nervous energy. It makes people well. Read the experiences of Mrs. E. M. Abbott of Chelsea, Mass., who gives the voluntary testimony:

"I have taken Paine's celery compound and it is all that it is recommended to be. My mother and father have also taken it; it has given them new life. They take it every spring or whenever they do not feel just right. Mother was all run down last spring and after taking a few doses of the compound she gained new strength. We would not be without Paine's celery compound as a family medicine."

Natural History Kiddle.

A small boy had been diligent in studying punctuation. As a reward his father took him to see the trained lions and tigers.

Boy—Father, why is a sentence with a comma like that lion?

Father—Dear me! Yes, to be sure. Capital! something about tail and tail—? Good. Give me something harder next time.

Boy—No. You are way off. Father—You don't say so! Well, what is the answer?

Boy—A sentence with a comma is like a lion because the first has a pause at the end of its clause, and the other claws at the end of its paw. See?—Harper's Young People.

Practice and Practice.

They were discussing the fortunes of the various lawyers of the city recently in one of the ante-rooms of the courthouse. One in particular was mentioned.

"I understand he's worth $100,000," said one. "I wonder if he's made it all out of his practice?"

"No. He made it out of his practices," remarked another—and they all understood.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

A grateful sense of activity comes after a few days taking of this remarkable remedy, and one feels again fit for every duty, mentally and bodily.

For indigestion, languidness, dropsy, liver and kidney complaint, Paine's celery compound has a reputation that is established in thousands of households throughout the United States and even slight undertakings. Overwork, anxiety, worry and excitement of any kind is quickly accompanied by a painful sense of weariness and fatigue.

Little blood is sent to the tired organs, and nutrition and strength alike fail. Paine's celery compound is prepared to exactly meet the urgent needs of an overworked, feeble system. People with feeble circulation who habitually have cold hands and feet, people who are never quite well, the aged and the young, feel at once from Paine's celery compound the effects of an increased power.

Ten days less of time on account of sickness, and a doctor bill to pay, a very thing but pleasant for a man of a family to contemplate, whether he is a laborer, mechanic, merchant or publisher. James O. Jones, publisher of the Leader, Mexico, Tex., was sick in bed for ten days with the griping and its prevalence a year or two ago. Later in the season he had a second attack. He says: "In the latter case I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with considerable success, I think, only being in bed a little over two days. The second attack, I am satisfied, would have been equally as bad as the first, but for the use of this remedy." It should be borne in mind that the grip is a very serious and very severe cold, and a quinine precisely the same treatment. When you wish to cure a cold quickly and effectually give this remedy a trial. Twenty-five and 50 cents a bottle. For sale by all druggists.
